It is so seldom that we can conscientiously commend any action of the Radical party from any stand-point, that we always feel it to be a duty as well as a pleasure to do so. The Convention at Favetteville affords an opening for commendation that the JOURNAL hastens to take advantage of, much upon the same principle that an old acquaintance of ours commended a speech of a man in his neighborhood. Said he, "It's a very fine speech in its way, but it's a d-d poor way." The point the Joursal commends is the consistency and the boldness of the Convention. We much prefer to fight an open enemy. The nomination of Neill McKay, the father of the doctrine of "no parlor and no kitchen," the first white native born North Carolinian who so far forgot his race, who so far forgot his color, who so far forgot his blood, who so far forgot the instincts, the prejudices if you will, of birth and education as to ignore the line of demarcation, drawn by their common Creator between black and white, was enough to satisfy reasonable men that the duly accredited representatives of the Radical party from this district, in Con- Journal "House Bill No. 30": vention assembled, recognized no difference between white men and
